What Is the LII?

The Legal Information Institute (LII) is an independent applied research group housed at Cornell University Law School, whose mission is to help people find and understand the laws that govern them, by:

1

Publishing law online, for free

2

Creating materials that help people
understand law

3

Exploring new technologies that make it easier to find specific laws

Since 1992, the LII has provided free, easy access to federal law at law.cornell.edu, the most widely accessed online resource for legal information. With over 500,000 pages of bulk data reformatted into readable and enriched text, supported by new technologies to improve access and objective contextual analysis to facilitate comprehension, the LII goes far beyond what official government sources currently offer, resulting in a yearly average of 33 million unique visits to the site from around the world.

Who Uses the LII?

LII readership includes lawyers, government employees, businesspeople, students, and average citizens. Even individuals with access to an official source or a fee-based service regularly prefer the LII's user experience.

Why Be an LII Corporate Sponsor?

- Support a great cause: Sponsors are improving public access to law and upholding the idea that an informed citizenry is essential for a thriving democratic society.
- Build recognition: Visitors associate sponsors with their positive experience of finding valuable legal information online quickly and without cost, and also with the highly respected brands of the LII and Cornell University.

Sponsorship Details

$5,000 sponsors receive a hyperlinked logo prominently placed on our website that 0.5% (~170,000) of our dedicated visitors see for a full year. With each $5,000 increase in giving, recognition increases proportionately. Sponsors also receive recognition on a devoted thank you page.

Sponsors may choose to receive their recognition in one of the following collections of primary law:

- The U.S. Code
- The Code of Federal Regulations
- The Federal Rules
- The U.S Constitution
- Wex – the LII’s plain-language legal encyclopedia

Funding from sponsors directly supports LII operations, providing it with greater stability and budgetary independence and allowing for more effective project planning and execution.
